'We cannot do today's job with yesterday's methods and expect to be in business tomorrow' – Peter Drucker

Understanding and managing change are the dominant themes of management today. Adapting to the ever changing present is essential for success in the unpredictable future. However, the process of implementing change at the workplace is difficult, to say the least. People everywhere are struggling to adapt to constant change initiatives. Employees tend to resist change. However, once they understand the dynamics of change and its benefits, they will be able to develop innovative ways of dealing with organisational problems and make use of the emerging opportunities.

Objective : The one-day workshop seeks to enable the participants to gain new insights and perceptions about the fast changing contemporary world and address this challenge of change by adopting appropriate strategies. It helps them to create an action plan for implementing change initiatives in their companies/organizations.

Content : The topics of deliberation:

- Opportunities and challenges today
- Why Change?
- What are the barriers to change?
- Needs and strategies for change
- How to be a change agent

The programme will be interactive in nature and consists of lectures, ppt. presentations, games & activities and group discussions

We have got to put a lot of money into changing behaviour* - Bill Gates
